Develin's Habeas Corpus Adjourned till To-day.

Conover's Contempt Case.—A Referee to be Appointed.

The Matter of the Books Adjourned to Saturday.

MR. DEVELIN IN CUSTODY, BUT NOT IN JAIL.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—Special Term.
Westminster, July 22.
Before Judge Ingraham.

The Astor corpus in the matter of Charles Develin having precedence of other cases, came on for argument last 11 o'clock in the Chambers of the Court-House, which was attended by an unusual number of the Metropolitan corps.

Mr. Develin was not present, but Messrs. O'Conor, Busteed and Busteed, and Messrs. [illegible] and Wm. C. Noyes appeared as counsel in the case.

Mr. Busteed read the following as the return prepared by counsel, which was sworn to by Mr. Develin. It is as follows:

[illegible] was served.

That after the death of Joseph S. Taylor [illegible] the said return specified, that in pursuance of the said order, on the 16th day of June, 1857, before me, James W. Fabr, [illegible] Supreme Court, at Chambers, in the City of New-York, [illegible] "An Act to amend the Charter of the City of New-York," passed April 14, 1857, [illegible] the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, and did all things required to qualifying [illegible] the duties of said office, and thereupon [illegible] entered upon such office, and took full possession of said office and of all the books, papers and things appertaining thereto, and continued in the full possession of said office and [illegible] thereafter until his arrest under the [illegible] on the 16th day of July, 1857.

That on the 18th day of June, A. D. 1857, [illegible] Conover made complaint in writing, [illegible] to the Hon. Charles A. Peabody, [illegible] one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York, to compel the said Develin to deliver to [illegible] Conover the books, papers and things belonging or appertaining to the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York; that said complaint was duly sworn to by [illegible] Conover, on the same day and year aforesaid, [illegible] and thereupon the said Justice, duly [illegible] an order, directed to the said Develin, requiring him [illegible] to show cause before him, at Chambers, in the City Hall, in the City of New-York, why he should not be compelled to deliver the said books, papers, maps and documents to your petitioner. And your petitioner will ever pray, &c., &c.

D. D. CONOVER.

City and County of New-York.—D. D. Conover, the above petitioner, being duly sworn, saith that he has read the foregoing petition by him subscribed, and that the same is true of his own knowledge.

D. D. CONOVER.

Sworn, June 16, 1857, before me, James W. Fabr, Commissioner of Deeds.

Supreme Court.—On the foregoing petition, let Charles Develin, therein named, show cause before me, on the 23d instant, at 10 o'clock M., at the Chambers of the Justices of this Court, in the City Hall, in the City of New-York, why he should not be compelled forthwith to deliver to the petitioner the books, papers, maps and documents, belonging or appertaining to the Office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York.

Dated June 19, 1857. C. A. PEABODY.

To Charles Devlin, Esq.:

Sir: Please take notice of the foregoing petition and order. Yours respectfully,

FIELD & SLUYTER, Attorneys for Petitioner,
No. 23 Broadway.

Service.—That the said Conover caused copies of said complaint, affidavit and order to show cause to be served on said Develin, who, at the time appointed in said order, appeared before said Justice, and produced in answer to said Justice a certain affidavit, of which the following is a copy:

In the Matter of the Application of Daniel D. Conover vs. Charles Develin, to obtain the Books, Papers, &c., of Street Commissioner.—City and County of New-York, ss.—Charles Develin, of said City, being duly sworn, saith that he is in possession of the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, and exercising the duties thereof, and entitled to the same. That deponent was duly appointed to said office on the 16th day of June, A. D. 1857, by the Mayor of the City of New-York, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen of said City. That he has accepted the said appointment, and has duly taken and filed the oath of office as such Street Commissioner, and given the requisite security as required by law. Deponent further saith, that at the time he was so appointed, Charles Conover was, as he was then informed and believes, performing the duty of Street Commissioner aforesaid, claiming and having, as deponent has been informed and believes, the right to do so, by virtue of his holding the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York. Deponent further saith, that he has been advised and believes that said D. D. Conover has no right or title whatever to the office of Street Commissioner for the said City.

CHARLES DEVELIN.

Sworn this 20th day of June, 1857, before me, James W. Fabr, Commissioner of Deeds.

And the said Conover caused to be served on the said Develin a notice of the motion for the order to show cause, and that the said Justice made an order directing the said Develin to show cause before him on the 23d day of June last, at the Chambers of the Justices of the said Court, why he should not be so compelled; and at the time and place so appointed, the said Conover and the said Develin appeared before the said Justice, and due proof having been made of the service of the said order the said Justice proceeded to inquire into the circumstances, which inquiry was continued before him from day to day until this day, the matter having been thus regularly adjourned and the said Develin not having made such that he has truly delivered to the said Conover the said books, maps, records and documents; and it appearing to the said Justice that Conover is the successor to said office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, and that the said books, maps, papers and documents are withheld, and that the said Develin still exists and refuses to deliver up the same. It is hereby ordered that the said Charles Develin forthwith deliver to the said Conover all the books, maps, papers and documents belonging or appertaining to the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, which have come to the hands of the said Develin, or in default thereof that a warrant issue to the Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, to commit the said Develin to the jail of the said City and County, there to remain until he deliver to the said Conover the said books, maps, papers and documents, or as be otherwise discharged according to law.

And the same being required by the said Conover, it is further ordered that a search warrant issue to the said Sheriff, commanding him to search, in the day time, the apartments and rooms occupied and set apart for the office of Street Commissioner of the said City, for the books, papers, maps, and documents, and to seize them and bring them before the said Justice. (Signed) CHARLES A. PEABODY.

Dated New-York, July 16, 1857.

Further, That the only claim of title to said office of Street Commissioner pretended or alleged by or in behalf of said Conover in such proceeding before said Justice was the appointment of said Conover to said office by the Governor of the State of New-York, as stated and set forth in the aforesaid complaint. And that it was not in any way asserted or charged by or on the part of said Conover before said Justice, in the proceedings aforesaid, that any book or paper belonging to said office had ever come to the hands of the said Charles Develin, or of any person whatever, at any time during any vacancy in said office of Street Commissioner, or at any time before the period during which the said Conover was, as he in his said complaint and affidavits alleged, in full possession of the said office and of the books and papers appertaining to the same.

Further, That in pursuance of such order so made by said Justice Peabody on the 16th day of July, A. D. 1857, and in the proceeding in which such order was made and in no other or different proceeding, and under no other or different authority, power, duty, or right than such other, the said Justice did on the 18th day of July, A. D. 1857, issue on the prayer of the said Conover the warrant which is set forth in the return to the writ of Habeas Corpus aforesaid; and that neither by any complaint or allegation whatever, nor in any manner whatever did any other matter of fact whatever appear before said Justice in support of the said proceeding as had before him, or in support of the issuing of said warrant against the said Charles Develin except the said allegations of Daniel D. Conover in his complaint and affidavits aforesaid.

Thirdly, At the time of issuing and service of the said warrant the said Daniel D. Conover by force and violence, and with the aid of one John R. Farrington and others, seized and took into the possession of himself and said Farrington all the books and papers belonging or appertaining to the said office, and from thence hitherto all such books and papers have been entirely out of the possession and beyond the power or control of the said Charles Develin, and at the time of the possession and control of the said Conover, and the persons so acting in his aid in the proceedings aforesaid. And, therefore, the said Charles Develin insists that his imprisonment and detention aforesaid, are unlawful, because upon the matters aforesaid, it appears, and appeared to said Justice, that the said Daniel D. Conover was not, and is not, the Street Commissioner, as alleged by him, or successor in that office of the said Joseph S. Taylor. And also, that the said Charles Develin was and is such successor; and, also, that the title to such office was in dispute between the said Conover and the said Charles Develin, and that said Conover had not such undisputed right to the custody of such books and papers as was necessary by the law of the land to justify the said proceeding before said Justice in that behalf. And the said Charles Develin further insists that the said imprisonment and detention are unlawful, because it was not made to appear to said Justice in said proceeding, that any book or paper belonging or appertaining to said office had ever come to the hands of the said Charles Develin, or of any person whatever, at any time during any vacancy in said office of Street Commissioner, or at any time before the period during which the said Conover was, as he in his said complaints and affidavits alleged in full possession of the said office, and of the books and papers appertaining to the same.

CHARLES DEVELIN.

Sworn to before me, this 22d day of July, 1857. D. P. Ingraham, First Judge.

The argument was adjourned till Thursday at 10 o'clock.

The Conover Contempt Case.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—Special Term.
Before Judge Ingraham.

The Mayor, &c., vs. Daniel D. Conover and others.—An order to show cause having been granted by Judge Ingraham, directing Daniel D. Conover to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, which was made returnable on the 23d inst., but as the Develin habeas corpus had been adjourned, all sides consented to argue the contempt matter.

Mr. Busteed opened the case on the part of the plaintiffs, by reading affidavits to sustain the charges of contempt complained of:

The following are the affidavits read on both sides:

THE PLAINTIFF'S SIDE.

AFFIDAVIT OF JAMES T. BRADY.

City and County of New-York, ss.—James T. Brady, being duly sworn, says that on the 18th day of July, instant, he served upon Daniel D. Conover, one of the defendants above-named, copies of the following papers, viz.: the complaint in this action, the affidavit of Richard Busteed, Esq., verifying the same, the summons in the action, and the injunction order therein made at special term, before Hon. Daniel P. Ingraham, on the 17th day of July, instant; that such service was made by delivering said copies and papers to said Conover personally, and that the copy order for injunction, aforesaid, was duly certified as such copy by the clerk of this Court. Deponent further saith, that he delivered said papers to Conover, at the moment when Hon. Charles A. Peabody handed to Mr. Henry Berthoff the search warrant, just signed by said Peabody in the proceedings by Conover against Charles A. Develin, to obtain possession of the books and papers of the Street Commissioner's office; that said warrant had not yet passed out of the hands of said Berthoff, nor been delivered either to Mr. Field or constable Farrington; that when deponent served the papers, Mr. Conover was seated beside his counsel at the table adjoining the Judge's bench; deponent further saith that he has read the affidavit of Mr. Charles Turner, this day made in this action, and that all the proceedings in the apartments of the Street Commissioner, in reference to taking possession of said apartments, or of any books therein, under said warrant, on the 18th day of July, instant, must have been after deponent so served said papers on Mr. Conover.

JAMES T. BRADY.

Sworn to this the 20th day of July, 1857, before me,
James Sanford, Commissioner of Deeds.

THOMAS CARROLL'S AFFIDAVIT.

Thomas Carroll, being duly sworn, says: that on the 18th day of July, inst., he served a certified copy of the injunction order herein, a copy of which is hereto annexed, marked "A," on John R. Farrington, one of the Constables of the City of New-York; that said service was made on said Farrington in the private office of the Street Commissioner, in the Hall of Records, in this City, when he was about to execute a search warrant issued by Mr. Justice Peabody, for the books, &c., in the office of said Street Commissioner, and before the said Farrington had taken any books, papers, maps or documents whatever from said office; that at the time of said service, deponent informed said Farrington that he was desirous to make a copy of the said injunction, and asked said Farrington if he would permit deponent to there make such copy, and consider such service good; to which said Farrington answered "certainly;" that thereupon deponent seated himself in the chair usually occupied by the Street Commissioner, for the purpose of making such copy, when Marvin R. Brewer, Esq., came up to deponent and asked to look at said injunction order; that deponent handed said Brewer said order, who thereupon turned to said Farrington and directing said Farrington's attention to said injunction, said, "You are not protected in this injunction. It does not restrain you. It only restrains the Sheriff." Upon which Farrington took the paper in his hands, and, after examining it, said: "Yes, that is so. I will go on and act under the warrant." That thereupon he handed back to this deponent the said injunction order. That this deponent then tendered the said Farrington the said order as certified, which the said Farrington then, for the first time, refused to accept. And deponent further says, that he then handed the said injunction to one of the clerks of Mr. Develin to have copied, and went from said office to the Supreme Court; that up to this time the said Farrington had not taken from said Street Commissioner's office nor taken possession of any books, papers, maps or other documents. That deponent immediately after going into the Supreme Court room where Mr. Justice Peabody was then holding Court, and remaining there for about three minutes, again went over to the Street Commissioner's office; that on his way to said office he met Mr. Geo. Peckham, said to be a clerk of Mr. Conover, with an arm full of books, said to have been taken from the Street Commissioner's office; and also, the said Farrington in the hallway of the said Hall of Records with the balance of the books taken from the said office. And deponent further says, that he thereupon went into the Street Commissioner's office and obtained from the party copying the same the said certified copy injunction and served it again on said Farrington as he was descending the stairs of the Hall of Records, where such Street Commissioner's office is, and that such service was made by deponent by laying said injunction order on the pile of books which the said Farrington was then carrying, and leaving the same with him; and deponent says, that notwithstanding the service of the said injunction order upon him, the said Farrington took the said books and conveyed them to the Supreme Court Room, where Mr. Justice Peabody was holding court, and there left them.

THOMAS CARROLL.

Sworn to before me this 20th day of July, 1857,
James Sandford, Commissioner of Deeds.

City and County of New-York, ss.: Charles Turner, of the said City, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he is the Deputy Street Commissioner in the Street Commissioner's Department of the City of New-York, and has held the office since the month of January, 1856; that Joseph S. Taylor having been duly elected, entered upon the duties of the office of Street Commissioner, on the first Monday of January, 1856, and during that month the said Taylor nominated deponent to the Board of Aldermen, as Deputy Street Commissioner, and deponent was by said Board duly confirmed; that on or about the 9th of June last, the said Taylor died, whereupon deponent became, by virtue of the laws and ordinances relating to said office, acting Street Commissioner, and did so act and discharge the duties thereof, until Charles Develin was appointed and entered upon the duties of the office of Street Commissioner, on the 16th day of June last; that on or about the 18th day of said month one Daniel D. Conover came to the office and informed deponent that he (Conover) had been appointed Street Commissioner by the Governor, exhibiting to deponent at the same time a Commission purporting to be signed by John A. King, and said to deponent, "I appoint you my Deputy," that said Conover came to the office also on the 15th and 16th days of June ultimo, and asserted himself to be Street Commissioner, and repeated to deponent that he was continued in office as Deputy by him, Conover; that in the afternoon of Saturday, the 18th of July last, deponent was in the office of Street Commissioner, in the apartments, and seated at the desk usually occupied by and used by the Head of the Department, which deponent was transacting the business of the office; the said Conover entered the apartment where deponent was seated, accompanied by about thirty persons, among whom deponent recognized James Irving and Marvin R. Brewer; that Conover advanced near to deponent, and said he had been declared Street Commissioner by the Court, and as that was the room provided for the Street Commissioner, he had come to take possession of it; that deponent said he was Deputy Street Commissioner, and in the absence of Mr. Develin could not give it up; some one of those who followed Conover into the office then said, "Go and take his seat Dan;" Conover then instantly seized hold of deponent with great violence and tried to eject deponent from the chair in which he was seated; not succeeding he was immediately assisted by some of the persons with him, when deponent was forced out of the chair and forcibly and violently pushed outside of the railing, which incloses the desk and a portion of the office; that the struggle lasted for a minute, during which time and until deponent was put outside the railing, Conover and several others had hold of deponent; that deponent was badly bruised and injured by said Conover and his accomplices, the marks and traces of which are yet visible upon deponent's body, and deponent has suffered much pain therefrom, and is under the care of his family physician therefor; that deponent will be sixty-two years of age on the 11th day of next month; that deponent remained in the outer office until four o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday; that deponent went as usual to the office about half-past eight o'clock; that Conover came there about nine o'clock and informed deponent that he had appointed a person as Deputy Street Commissioner instead of deponent, and demanded his office keys, which deponent declined to give; Conover then forbid deponent touching any of the books or papers of the office, or taking any part in the business of the same, and threatened deponent with further violence should he attempt to do so.

CHARLES TURNER.

Sworn to before me this 20th day of July, 1857.
James Sanford, Com. of Deeds.

AFFIDAVIT OF DEVELIN'S SON.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Charles Develin, Jr., of the said City, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the son of Charles Develin, one of the defendants; that he (deponent) was present in the Street Commissioner's office on Saturday last, when D. D. Conover came in; that deponent has read the foregoing affidavit of Mr. Turner; that deponent was present, and saw the occurrences therein related concerning the forcible ejectment of said Turner from the private office of the Street Commissioner; that the said affidavit, so far as it relates to the occurrences which then and there took place, is true within this deponent's knowledge.

And this deponent further says, that at the time and place aforesaid, he saw D. D. Conover have hold of Mr. Turner, trying to force him out of his seat, and at the same time James Irving and Pat Matthews also had hold of Mr. Turner, and assisted Conover to eject Mr. Turner outside the railing which also encloses a portion of said apartment; and further deponent saith not.

CHARLES DEVELIN, Jr.

Sworn to before me this 20th day of July, 1857.
James Sanford, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Field then read the affidavits on the part of the defendant, Conover, to show that he had not committed the contempt complained of. These were from Mr. Conover himself, Mr. Marvin R. Brewer, Constable Farrington, William J. Fuller, John Colvin, E. Harrison Reade, John J. Silcock, James Peckham and Joseph R. Pollock. They set forth facts that have been substantially stated over and again already in the Times, for which reason, and their length, we omit their publication.

Mr. Brady stated that as there was a conflict of testimony as to the facts, he would ask the Court to order a reference to some competent person who might examine the witnesses on both sides.

Mr. Field then addressed the Court in opposition to such order of reference. There was, he said, in this case no more ground for an attachment than there was for believing that his learned friend (Mr. Brady) was the King of Siam or any other Kingdom on the other side of Ireland.

There was a complete answer to the affidavits on the other side. Though satisfied as counsel, that Mr. Conover was not bound by the injunction, they had, out of respect for the Court and his Honor, who had granted it, advised Mr. Conover, as soon as they were aware it had issued, to desist from any further action until they could apply to the Court. Mr. Conover had most scrupulously regarded the mandate of that injunction. They had so advised him. So scrupulous had Mr Conover been not to touch a book or paper belonging to the office, that he had not even used the paper to write a private note upon—but had bought his own.

Now, under these circumstances, what was there that they wanted to know—merely when and where was the injunction served? that was the only question. As they had been called upon to show cause, they had showed cause. Mr. Brady was not quite so quick as he intended to be—Mr. Brewer had gone out of the Court before Mr. Brady had announced that he had obtained an injunction.

They had produced the affidavits of nine respectable and credible witnesses proving conclusively that they had obeyed the injunction out of respect for the Judiciary.

Mr. Noyes followed on the same side. If Courts had been invested with continuous or their injunctions with contempt, the offenders should be punished; and if it be claimed, as the learned counsel who had made the motion for a reference had said, that such was the case, no reference was necessary. If it was plain from the affidavits which had been made on both sides, that the injunction order of that Court had been violated, no reference was necessary; and they ought at once, in justice to themselves and in justice to the Court, to enter at once upon the discussion. And he now said that if there had been a contrivance to get entanglement for contempt by bringing about a violation of the injunction, it could not have been more skillfully planned. If there had been a contrivance to get an unwilling violation of the injunction, it could not have been more skillfully planned. He did not mean to say there had been any such contrivance; but there were facts placed upon the record to show how it had been brought about.

This injunction was applied for, and the order granted on the 11th July, pending the proceedings before Judge Peabody, and when it was very doubtful whether he would issue the warrant or not; and it was generally thought that he would not. The overseer had not then been removed; it was removed the next day; and Mr. Develin sought in this case for an injunction to restrain the proceedings before Judge Peabody. The injunction (part ormed) was served on Mr. Farrington, restraining them from executing a warrant that they thought would be issued; no such warrant, however, was issued, and that part of the injunction had therefore been stricken out. Now, that injunction should have been served immediately after it was issued. It was due to this Court, it was due to Mr. Conover, and it was due to the mandate of his Honor, that it should not have been kept in the custody of parties of the defendant to be brought out to suit a purpose when that purpose should arise. It was kept back till Judge Peabody had issued the warrant, and it was so kept back until the officer was out of the Court-House, and then there was an oral intimation that it had been issued. No injunction had been issued to Mr. Conover. It never had been issued to anybody else but Mr. Farrington. What was the inevitable result? To draw them into committing a breach before they had ever seen it.

He spoke of what was due to every one whom it was sought to charge with disobedience of an order of the Court. It was due to them that it should not be kept back for twenty-four hours, in order to charge them with a constructive violation.

Everything that was really a contempt of Court—a willful contempt—should meet with a condign punishment. After this warrant had gone forth then they serve this injunction. This being a matter which relates to the Court, and to preserve the respect due to the Law, and to the Court, which they were endeavoring to use as an instrument for their own purposes, did any reason exist why there any reason that there should be a reference? He submitted not.

They (the other side) had stated their case on their affidavits; they had, as he said, stated it most improperly. The defendants had met it by affidavits of more witnesses, and what was more, affidavits of persons who were cool and unexcited. The moment they had heard of the injunction they had shown every respect for the Court, and his Honor.

If, on the other hand, they had not answered the charge of contempt, there was no need of a reference.

Mr. Brady, for the plaintiffs, said that the answers here set up upon paper was a pettifogging and twaddle-rigging concoction. If the reference was granted, he would undertake to demonstrate by the evidence, that before Judge Peabody took his seat upon the bench, there was a preconcerted plan. He was not at all surprised that the gentleman on the other side (Mr. Field) objected to a reference. It was a well-established fact in the history of the world that those who undertook to father, or lend evil doings, always shrunk from any inquiry into their participation in them.

They would have better shown their faith in the truth of these affidavits in answer, by submitting to the reference; but they were well aware that it could only expose their own complicity. He would show that there had been a direct violation of the injunction, and that the time of the service had nothing to do with it, for there was just as cool and willful a violation afterwards as before. So far from there being any surprise, as his friend said, all the gentlemen on the other side looked forward to Develin's questioning that overseer, and that just as early as the Saturday morning came there would be an order. Mr. Field himself had said it would not take five minutes—that it ought not to take five minutes. He had not denied that; he did not know whether he meant to deny it now.

Mr. Field was about to make some remark, when—

Mr. Brady continued; I will show when that reference is granted, if it is granted. We will then see which will be the most fortunate in proving himself correct. But now, continued he, as to the question of surprise. The two gentlemen, Mr. Field and Mr. Noyes, were inside the room waiting for the decision. The Junior—or Mercury—the swift-footed Mr. Brewer, was waiting so as to go out of the door. Mr. Valtes was there, and he knew that the injunction had been served two hours before. That was, also, known to Mr. Berthoff. Mr. Brewer, Mr. Field and Mr. Conover, all knew the injunction had been served.

Mr. Field was understood to say that the affidavits denied this, and was that not enough?

Mr. Brady—No! It is not enough. It would not be enough if you were King of the Cannibal Islands. (Laughter.) As you ought to be, judging from your part in these transactions. I would not take, if you were King of the Cannibal Islands, (renewed laughter, which was suppressed by the Court.) I would not take your royal declaration.

Mr. Noyes asked whether the Court would permit such a line of remark.

Judge Ingraham said this was quite irrelevant and uncalled for.

Mr. Brady—It is not my custom, when remarks are made about me, not to retaliate with all the force I am master of. It is not my custom to let them pass unnoticed; and as the gentleman had placed two grenades upon my head I thought he should at least go through this case adorned with one. (Suppressed laughter.) It was said that Mr. Valtes did not leave the Court, but it was Mr. Farrington that was waiting inside, and when the warrant was granted Mr. Field insisted on his (Mr. Farrington's) name being inserted in it.

The struggle in point of time is whether Farrington left the Court before Conover was served. Brewer, "the swift-footed," and Farrington, so anxious were they, rushed out of Court—this hot weather, the perspiration streaming down their brows,—to execute the warrant. I challenge and defy the gentleman to this investigation. I care not that it is hot weather. I care not if it be the Summer solstice, as they have chosen this time to look up Mr. Develin. We wish to proceed and examine our disinterested, respectable witnesses, who were looking on. It is confessed that the senior counsel, acquainted as he is with all the rules of law, and what is due to courts, with all his experience, has viewed that process as one that was not entitled to respect. And if the swift-footed Mercury was beforehand with the first set of books, they well knew the injunction had been served before they took the second. But Mr. Conover says, "I did not touch them." He was in the front office room—to the exclusion of anybody else. He took possession at all hazards, and kept possession ever since. He, with his counsel, who wore a bold look I am happy to see does not now continue, made a precipitate rush from that Court-room, and took possession of the office and claimed the authority to control it, after the injunction had issued. As these matters are all capable of proof, we desire and solicit this reference.

Mr. Field—The learned counsel has said, among other offensive things, that I have said something elsewhere that I would not say here. Would I do, I dare to speak. If I were sitting as a Judge of the Supreme Court, and an injunction were to come to me to restrain me, I would trample it under foot. I would do more. And, Sir, if an injunction came here it should be trampled under foot. I think we have not got to that state of things that one Judge can grant an injunction against another. We have already gone too far with injunctions, and thought I am no prophet, I will venture an opinion that the power to grant them will be restricted or taken away. The idea of any disrespect to this Court or to your Honor is preposterous. As far as respects any authority coming from this Court to any other party, it will be maintained by us and our client; but if it be directed to a Court, may my tongue be blistered if I do not say it is an outrage. But counsel says, "Oh! it is not addressed to a Court." Was there any occasion to drag me personally into this matter? I think not; and I think that any decent member of the profession would, and that my friend will, on reflection, strike my name out. If not, it, of course, becomes a personal matter. They resort here to an Hibernian mode of getting injunctions against Courts, and against counsel, to restrain them from arguing a case. But, Sir, it is all unprofessional. I am very sorry that the name of any counsel should be dragged into any controversy; but I will bear the responsibility here and everywhere else. I need scarcely say that nowhere has there ever been a thought of anything disrespectful to this Court, or to yourself. The habitual respect which I entertain towards the Judge personally, in private and in public, would render such an idea impossible. I can entertain no other feeling towards a man eminent for everything that glorifies an individual and adorns the Bench.

Mr. C. O'Conor—I differ from many things that have been said in the course of this argument. I suppose that lawyers always act on their responsibility, and I am somewhat surprised that the gentleman should take objection to being selected for a defendant. If, in the course of our practice, we deem it to our clients' advantage to make any party defendant, we think it very ungentlemanly if that makes any difference between us, and if we expect this at the hands of our lay brothers, we ought to show the same in our intercourse with each other. He trusted therefore, that his friend, Mr. Field, would reconsider his vow of revenge. He would introduce an observation here—that he had thought of striking his name out, but since he had thought proper to make it a personal matter, and he was not to be influenced by such remarks, it should now take its course. In the other point of view, that was not the place to discuss it.

When the injunction was issued and served, the papers were all in the office in the Hall of Records, and in the custody of the officer appointed by the plaintiff, Mr. Turner. That was not denied. Mr. Conover was in possession of that office, and all the papers in it. That was not denied. It was said he had not touched them; that he had not put his finger upon them; but he has exercised control over them to the exclusion of every one else since the injunction was issued—that is not denied. One more fact: Certain it was, that in some form, capable of explanation or not capable of explanation, no matter which, his counsel, there in his presence, his leading counsel, spoke of the injunction as a thing to be held in respect in some degree, but he disregarded it, and used very warm language in reference to it in some quarters. [illegible]

Mr. Conover did not give directions in giving directions to Brewer or his agent, Mr. Farrington, and all may have been done without any act on his part. But, however that may be, the officer, Farrington, and the counsel, possessed themselves of some of these papers and brought them into Court; and immediately after that, they having all spoken about the injunction, he went over to the office of the Street Commissioner, and possessed himself of papers. Jacobus he was not forbid to take possession of that building, and he was forbid to take possession of the papers. Did he not follow up that act? They say he "did not intervene." What are going into the office, and after he had gone in cautioning the officer of the plaintiffs in the action, "no interference!"

It was as plain as the sun at noon-day—a simply manifest, above board, continued violation of this injunction. But if this had been corrected to which was very common. All attempts had been made to evade the injunction by hasty action. We had often known instances where Courts had intimated an intention to grant an injunction but had not granted it; and the party has run out of Court and done the act before the injunction was actually issued; but these were all contempts, though true it was they could not be punished. This kind of evasion was not to be tolerated. How would it be where a great number of persons were engaged?

There was a curious amount of difference in the statements in these affidavits. In the evidence of persons whose oaths were entitled to great respect. He (Mr. O'Conor) would not say it would be necessary to examine Judge Peabody or Mr. Noyes. He did not think it would. He was satisfied that neither of them had the most distant idea of not meeting the judgments with perfect obedience. He hoped no idea of Mr. Field's had prevented him from coming forward and stating his Honor to accept his explanation. He hoped he might vindicate himself, and for that reason alone he desired the reference, and that he supposed it would have much weight, for he supposed the contempt was committed.

The idea of Brewer and Farrington not being agents of Conover was preposterous. The idea that they might be running out of Court to execute the warrant, when the injunction was served—absurd! But suppose that was true. Suppose, when in came with the first armful of books when he had been served, was it not his duty as the plaintiff, the prosecutor in this proceeding, to stop them? What if that he had passed; the Sheriff and constables to pay it? and that he therefore proceeded to seize out Develin, and arrest Develin?

Judge Peabody, whose order it was, was no party—he was only an officer signing a paper in that capacity. Mr. Conover was the plaintiff or prosecutor. The fact, even when all these facts would be much facilitated by a reference.

It had been said there was a case, not reported, but one we heard of in the news of the day, somewhat similar. It appeared that one Conover, he was not at liberty to say it was this Conover—and his counsel, Mr. Field—he was not at liberty to say it was this Mr. Field—had obtained an order to hold the Mayor to bail. It further appeared that, by some hocus-pocus (he did not know how) the Sheriff was joined in the suit, and the effect was that the Sheriff, a well-known process server, could not execute the service of this order, and the Coroner was empowered. Now there was hardly a lawyer in the State of New-York, who, if he had been told, would not have decided that the Coroner could have a process against him. It would require great ingenuity to believe it possible. He would have to go out into the country and to wait to see if the Sheriff was included. The Coroner in his new-found dignity, (the idea of making him, a judicial officer, a catchpole,) armed with this writ, so ingeniously contrived, it appears, went to the Mayor and said he must be immediately arrested and held to bail in five thousand dollars; the Mayor was engaged and the attendant told the Coroner to be hanged, but he, forthwith the Mayor would run away, called upon the Police, then the army, and caused a battle royal—nearly a revolution. Was anything so absurd ever heard of? When Mr. Conover went to the Judge, and the Mayor said he did not know any officer with process had been there, and it appeared it was all owing to the sagacious contrivance and indecent haste of the party complaining. Was it wonderful that the Judge said: "I will examine this case no further; and I think it may be that Mr. Conover will find it very hard to justify himself if any further investigation is gone into?" There was no contempt, unless it was on the part of the persons who got up the contrivance, setting up pretended legal rights to trample on legal rights, to disturb the peace and order of the City. There are two classes of men (continued he) that hate the forms of law—that hate the deliberate course of proceeding by Courts which pause on their judgments and deliberate before their execution. They are anarchists and tyrants. Anarchists, who would break down all forms of law protecting the private citizen in the enjoyment of his rights; and tyrants, with whom there is no semblance of liberty, no law but the exercise of their own power. We have no tyrants, but we have anarchists. Let it not be said this is unimportant.

Your Honor can compel any person to undo what they have done; if such an order be made, that testimony stand as they did on the 11th; your Honor can do so. If a party come to court says I did not mean any contempt, and make reparation; your Honor may accept the apology. You may believe as a Judge, if not as a matter of fact, that the intention was not to disobey—proper explanations, regret and reparation are a passport to forgiveness. I hope that for the safety and security of your Honor's proceedings that you will order this investigation. If so, we will proceed with it; but if not, then you will hear us on the merits.

Judge Ingraham said he did not see had he ever believed that Mr. Field had meant to insult him or treat the Court with disrespect; but he would advise him to withdraw some remarks as to other parties in the case.

With regard to this motion, it was very unpleasant to have to pass upon conflicting testimony. It was unpleasant for Juries, and far more so to a Judge. Such an investigation might lead to further testimony and remove that difficulty. He thought it would be fair to all, and he would much prefer it should take that course than that he should now undertake to decide upon it from these affidavits.

Mr. Field supposed it would be restricted to an inquiry into the time and place of service.

Judge Ingraham replied in the affirmative.

Mr. Field then asked the Court to what observations of his his Honor had alluded.

Judge I. replied that it was as to making it a personal matter.

Mr. Field—Then I will take the advice of the Court and hope my learned friend will not further canvass them.

Mr. Noyes wished to call his Honor's attention to other observations which had been made. A gentleman had characterized the papers he (Mr. N.) had drawn up as "pettifogging and shinnifogging."

Mr. J. T. Brady—I withdraw nothing.

Mr. Field—Then I take back the withdrawal I have given.

Mr. O'Conor—I suppose there will be a day of reckoning.

Judge Ingraham said that as a motion had been made for a reference he would grant it, as it was an unpleasant thing for a Judge, much more a Judge, to pass upon the veracity of witnesses. On Thursday morning he would appoint a referee to adjudicate the case immediately.

The hour of adjournment having arrived, the Court adjourned to 11 o'clock to-day.

MR. CONOVER AT THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.

Mr. Conover continues to present himself punctually each morning at the Street Commissioner's office, and remains there till 4 P. M., the hour of closing. Being debarred from using the books and papers of the office, he has not thus far transacted any business beyond the ordinary routine business pertaining to the Department. The books and papers necessary for use in the formation of memorandums and other minor matters have been all of his own furnishing.

No further displacements have been made among the clerks since the day Mr. Conover installed himself. Pending the injunction relative to the use of the books, the clerks are having an easy time, and earning their salaries in a way doubtless very satisfactory to themselves.

As to the examination of Mr. Conover before Justice Welsh upon the charge of assault and battery preferred by Captain Barnaby, (upon which Mr. Conover made a voluntary surrender of himself,) no intimation has yet been given by the Justice as to the time when he will be prepared to examine the charge.

WHEREABOUTS OF MR. DEVELIN.

There is no doubt that Mr. Develin passed Saturday afternoon, and from thence to Tuesday morning, in Eldridge-street Jail. It is equally certain that so far as the action of proper tribunals is concerned, no permission has been given to withdraw him from the jail. However, he did not lay Tuesday night in confinement, nor last night, and it is probable that, Court decisions or otherwise, he will not return to his uncomfortable quarters in that prison. Those curious to ascertain the exact whereabouts of Mr. Develin, may perhaps gather some light on the subject from the following brief conversation which occurred yesterday between our Reporter and the Sheriff:

Reporter—Where is Mr. Develin?

Sheriff—He is in my custody.

Reporter—Is Mr. Develin in Eldridge-street Jail?

Sheriff—Well; ahem! he is in my custody. I tell you.

Reporter—So I understand; but the question is whether he is in Eldridge-street Jail?

Sheriff—I tell you Mr. Develin is in my custody—I am responsible for his safe custody, when called for.

It was understood that the parties employed yesterday at Eldridge-street Jail to see Mr. Develin, were told that he could not be seen, as he was very busy.

...ual Disaster by Lightning at the White Mountains—Two Men Killed—Several Injured.

From the Boston Traveller, July 21.

A sad disaster occurred at the Flume House of the White Mountains on Saturday afternoon. During a severe storm the house, in which there was a considerable number of people, was struck by lightning, with the loss of two lives, a number of others receiving injury. The following are the facts, gathered from Mr. W. M. Bancroft, of Fall River, who was at Littleton, N. H., at the time of the accident, but at the request of the wife of one of the deceased, proceeded soon after to the scene of the disaster.

It appears that the lightning struck a flag-staff erected upon the top of the house on the Fourth of July last. It shattered the pole, entered the house, and reaching the bell-wire followed them in different directions over the house, tearing away the plastering, making holes in the floor, with much other damage.

At the time of the stroke Mr. W. H. Smith, of Cambridge, was sitting upon the portico, with his chair on the hind legs and the back of his head against the outside blinds of a window. He was, apparently, watching with admiration the storm, his eyes being towards the clouds. The powerful fluid descended by the bell-wires to the window, through which it passed into the back part of the head of Mr. Smith. After the shock had passed, he was still sitting in his chair, and apparently watching the storm with his eyes half closed, but those who looked upon them knew that death was there. For two or three hours attempts were made, by applying cold water and by other means, to restore life, but in vain, the vital spark was fled. The only mark that could be found were a few holes in the back of the hat and of the head, about an inch or so apart. There was also, discoloration of the abdomen, where the fluid probably departed.

At the time of the shock, Rev. Theodore A. Rogers, of New Jersey, was conversing with Mr. Smith. He was thrown to the floor and stunned, but shortly recovered, and was able to leave the hotel soon after. Mr. Hackett, of Bethlehem, N. H., the clerk of the house, was near the window at the time, and passage twelve distant from Mr. Smith. One of the fingers was shattered, and received the fatal fluid as it descended by a ball-wire. It passed through the body and out at the floor, shattering the foot and setting the stocking on fire, so that it was burning when he was reached. He was killed instantly.

Mr. Freeman A. Tilton, the keeper of the house, was standing near the counter, in such a position that the fluid passed very near him as it left the room. He was thrown down and rendered insensible to such an extent, that it was only after an hour's labor with cold water and other appliances, that he was recovered. One eye remained blind, and it was feared that he might not again recover its sight. Otherwise he was uninjured.

Three other persons, two ladies and a gentleman, who were at a corner of the building, some fifty feet distant from the place occupied by Mr. Smith, were thrown down by the shock, but soon recovered. Others felt the shock severely, but received no personal injury. A lad of 10 years, a waiter in the house, was standing near Mr. Brandon, and was thrown down. He jumped up again, however, and ran out of the house in a bewildered state. Mrs. W. H. Smith, just before the accident, was sitting near the bell wires, but had laid down. Various articles in her room were thrown down and broken by the shock.

The body of Mr. Smith was brought to this city by his widow, accompanied by Mr. Bradbury, yesterday noon. She is an invalid, and was taken to the Mount Auburn by the advice of her physician for her health. The accident to the Flume about three-quarters of an hour before the accident occurred, and Mrs. Smith left on the return boat on Sunday, her thirtieth birthday, with her dead husband, who was only twenty-nine years and nine months of age. He was a member of the firm of Wright, Davis & Co., carpet dealers, over the Maine Railroad Depot in this city, and was an active and honorable business man, whose loss will be deeply felt by the surviving members of the firm, his relatives, and a large circle of friends. He resided at Cambridgeport, and left home on Thursday last, intending to return to-day. His funeral will take place at 3 o'clock P. M. to-day, at his residence, Cambridgeport, and will doubtless be attended by his Masonic brethren, he being a member of that order.

Mr. Bradbury informs us that after they left the Flume on Sunday for Plymouth, to take the cars, they experienced another severe thunder storm. In looking back it appeared to be quite severe at the Notch. A third storm was experienced on Monday morning.

The United States Refuse to Recognize their Own Currency.

New York, Saturday, July 18th, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

This afternoon I found it necessary to procure some Post-office stamps. I went to the department of the Office assigned to the delivery of that article, and not having any other money except paper money, laid down $3 in 5 and 3 cent. pieces. The person in charge very politely pushed back the money I presented, and informed me that he couldn't take anything like that quarters or halves. I am quite astonished at this. If the United States Government won't recognize 5 and 3 cent. pieces as lawful money, what did it coin them for?

Respectfully, A. O'B.
